

John Young

John Young, one of the most imaginative composers of computer music of his generation, will be presenting a selection of his multi-channel and multimedia acoustic works, along with an informal talk about his work in general.

Electroacoustic Music Concert and Talk

Wed., 9/20/17 | 8:00 PM
350 Sullivant Hall - ACCAD

John Young is Professor of Composition in the Music, Technology and Innovation Research Centre at De Montfort University, Leicester, UK. His output includes multi-channel electroacoustic pieces, large-scale radiophonic work and music combining instruments and electroacoustic sounds. He composes largely with his own field recordings, using these as windows on experience in creating new, imaginative sound worlds by embedding them in networks of digitally realised sound design.

Hosted by the Ohio State University School of Music and
The Advanced Computing Center for the Arts & Design (ACCAD)